AGAINST FILM LEGISLATION.

Samuel Goldwyn, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, on the eve of sailing for England yesterday on board the Aquitania to study Continental film conditions for two months, issued a warning to American legislators not to sacrifice the leadership of the United States in photoplay production to foreign competition through ill advised legislation.

"America has gained a world's market in motion pictures, and if we are not careful we will lose it in a short time," he said. "The proposed legislative limitations on the motion pictures will have a serious financial effect on this industry, which, solely through the aggressiveness of American producers, has established the United States as the leading nation in this new art."

"Foreign film producers are increasing their output with startling rapidity. For America to sacrifice its freedom in this means of expression will therefore result in a sacrifice of world business. Objectionable themes in motion pictures are bound to be eliminated. Salaciousness is doomed not only because it is not artistic, but because it is not profitable."

DIVING GIRL A WRITER.

Miss Louise Owen of the Hippodrome Takes Up Fiction.

Hippodrome chorus girls now have a new claim to distinction. They are posing—unknown to themselves—for a series of little stories on back stage life which are being written by one of their own number, Miss Louise Owen, better known to her conferees of the theatre as "Wampy."

These stories, including the "Chorus Girl de Luxe," "Dressing Room Delight" and "Scandal," have found publication in magazines, and Miss Owen has orders for as many more as she can produce in her scant leisure as a Hippodrome diver and chorus girl.

When she came to the Hippodrome this unusual member of the chorus had no idea she could write. She is a New York girl, a graduate of the New York University Social Service course, and for two years a volunteer worker in the Jacob Rills Settlement House. Convinced that this work was not her real metier, Miss Owen, who was an excellent amateur diver, went into vaudeville with a diving act for a short time and then joined the Hippodrome forces in the water spectacle in "Happy Days."

Her experiences with the 300 girls in the big playhouse convinced her that the average writer of intimate studies of the theatre knows very little of what he or she describes. So Miss Owen sat down and tried to transfer to paper her own impressions of little episodes of everyday life in the mysterious regions behind the footlights. The first attempts were miserable failures. But Miss Owen is a sensible young woman. She concluded there must be a trick to this writing game, so she spent hours in the New York Public Library studying books of short story technique and the works of the masters of short story writing. After six months her first story was accepted. Now she spends two hours every morning at her typewriter and has already made over $1,000 with her contributions to periodicals.
